From the Rector
Sir Rick Trainor

Academic year 2014–15 – which saw the beginning of Exeter’s eighth century – featured generosity of commendable scale and scope from the College’s donors. These gifts provide resources which will do much to facilitate the College’s increasing focus on academic excellence at a time of ever greater competition both within Oxford and from other world-leading universities.

I am very pleased to report that during my first academic year as Rector a total of £9.9m was raised by the College from alumni, parents and Friends, a substantial portion of which came from legacies (the subject of a separate article on page 23 of this Report). The Annual Fund attracted £617,000 in gifts. In total, some 27% of all alumni chose to contribute in the 2014–15 financial year.

Cohen Quad, the College’s single greatest physical expansion in its 701-year history, naturally figures largely in this account of recent donations to Exeter (please see the article on page 14). The Quad, whose scale and beauty are increasingly evident even to casual passers-by on Walton Street, is moving closer to completion. We are very grateful to our numerous donors, many of whom have taken the opportunity to name one of the 90 much-needed student bedrooms. An anonymous gift has enabled the cleaning and conservation of books in preparation for their move to the new archive and state-of-the-art reading room at Walton Street. As these examples indicate, Cohen Quad – a highly imaginative initiative launched by Rector Cairncross and her colleagues – provides Exeter with the opportunity to improve the quality of everything that it does as a College.

A key aspect of our activities, of course, is teaching. In this respect I am particularly pleased to note a gift by Mike Coleman (1979, Geology) which has created the Giuseppe Vernazza Fellowship in Earth Sciences. This enables the College to have two Fellows in the subject (created in its modern form by Sir Charles Lyell [1816, Classics]) – and maintain the long tradition of excellent teaching in Earth Sciences at Exeter.

Also in connection with undergraduates, members of the Exeter College Incentive Scheme (ECIS) – who pledge to donate a certain amount for each first class degree to incentivise both the College and students – raised £54,623 in the 2014–15 academic year in response to the distinguished work of our students and Fellows.

Another key aspect of donations to Exeter relates to the provision of bursaries for students in need. The many alumni who contributed to Exeter’s Student Support Fund during 2014–15 included Ernest Werlin (1968, Economics) and Craig Shuttleworth (1983, Jurisprudence).

Many Exeter students are, of course, postgraduates, for whom a significant number of scholarships have been created in recent years using donations to the College. Academic year 2014–15 saw a legacy from my predecessor Rector Butler used to create the Marilyn Butler Scholarship, a graduate scholarship for a student pursuing further study in Romantic Studies, her own research area.

In all these aspects of academic excellence, donations are crucial to allowing Exeter to perform at its current high level – and to aspire to even better. On behalf of everyone in the cohesive Exeter Family (many members of which I had the great pleasure of meeting during the year), I thank the donors of 2014–15 very warmly indeed!
College Finances

The College has once again benefited from an 11% return on investments which, together with significant legacy gifts, has grown the overall value of the endowment to £68.5m.

Exeter’s endowment is vital to the College as the income generated each year, according to the College’s spend rule of 3.25%, is used to provide student hardship support and to subsidise the cost of teaching, which tuition fee income alone cannot cover.

Endowment growth at this rate, and at this point in time, is especially important as in 2014-15 the College made a special transfer of £6.35m from the endowment towards the final construction costs of Cohen Quadrangle. Careful management and investment of the endowment, together with £5.7m received in gifts, has seen its value increase despite the special transfer.

Donations received this year totalled £9.9m. Of this, £5.7m was added to the endowment, £2m was held for restricted purposes, and £2.1m was unrestricted.

Of the restricted donations, £1.8m was given to Cohen Quad and held in reserve for that purpose.

The chart below shows how the endowment donations were allocated. The legacies received are very welcome additions to the endowment for the support of teaching in future years.

The College’s income for 2014-15 (which does not include the donations to the endowment shown on the preceding page) exceeded its expenditure, as the College prepares to pay for the main construction work at Cohen Quad in 2015-16. This is largely thanks to the restricted donations given for Cohen Quad and the sale of Stapeldon House, which together came to £3.1m. As usual, tuition fee income does not cover the full cost of teaching and therefore each student is subsidised by the College with income from the endowment, conference activity, and donations.
The Cost of Every Gift

Exeter prides itself that every penny given in donations goes entirely to support the purpose for which it was given. That is, no administrative fee is deducted from any gifts and the costs of fundraising and alumni outreach are met from the College’s own administrative budget.

In 2014-15 Exeter’s Annual Fund raised £617,000, which represents £10 donated for every £1 invested by the College (including staff salary costs). This high return ratio comes largely from those donors who make a regular gift to the College via standing order or direct debit. This means that they do not need to be encouraged to give each year and College resources can be spent on encouraging others to do the same. Furthermore, running telephone campaigns and designing publications in-house ensures that costs remain low to achieve the greatest return on investment.

It is also worth noting that the total Development and Alumni Relations budget includes the salaries of four non-fundraisers, as well as subsidies for events and the cost of all publications.

This combination of Exonian support and the work of a dedicated team demonstrates once again the strong partnership between the College and the alumni and Friends of Exeter. In working together, we can achieve so much for current and future generations of students.

How the Annual Fund was Spent in 2014–15

Exeter’s Annual Fund is made up of donations that are spent in the financial year in which they are received to enable Exeter to fund the areas of greatest priority. The Annual Fund is vitally important as it enables the College to offer support to students across all areas of life at Exeter. In the 2014–15 financial year £617,000 was donated to the Annual Fund and 27% of alumni chose to make a gift.

Eighty-two per cent of all donations to the Annual Fund were made without a specific area of support being requested by the donor. This allows the College to direct gifts towards the areas of greatest need. In 2014–15 the Annual Fund was spent on the following areas:

Access and Outreach

This year £16,000 was used to fund Exeter’s access work such as school residential programmes, taster days and conferences that are particularly focussed on the West Country and Channel Islands (regions with which the College has historic links). In an exciting step in the advancement of Exeter’s access work the College has appointed its very own full-time Outreach Officer (a role previously shared with Lincoln College) to inspire and attract the next generation of talented students.

ANNUAL FUND DISBURSEMENT 2014–15

- Student support: £49,659
- Library books: £28,843
- Access and outreach: £16,000
- Tutorial support: £310,000
- College academic grants: £9,252
- Cohen Quad development: £203,246

The Annual Fund helped the College Library to purchase nearly 800 new texts in 2014–15.
Student Support

Nearly £50,000 was used to provide various forms of student support, such as Exonian Bursaries for those experiencing unexpected financial hardship. This sum is in addition to financial aid granted from Exeter’s dedicated Student Support Fund, composed of gifts from alumni, that ensures students receive the necessary financial support as soon as they step into the Porter’s Lodge at the beginning of their degree.

Library

Donations have continued to support the Library, with £28,843 used to purchase nearly 800 new texts across all subjects. This allows students to request the new books they need for their courses and see them on the shelves in just a matter of days, consequently reducing the need for students to spend considerable amounts on expensive textbooks.

Tutorial Support and Academic Grants

Maintaining the high quality of teaching across the College’s broad range of subjects requires a vast financial outlay. £310,000 of donations to the Annual Fund were used to fund this important aspect of College life. Close to £10,000 of academic grants were awarded to students to help fund their research at both undergraduate and graduate levels.

Cohen Quad Development

With the first cohort of students moving into Cohen Quad (architect’s render pictured below) in under a year’s time, £203,246 was transferred towards the cost of this transformational project. For further information on the funding and development of Cohen Quad, please see page 14.
Peer Group Giving

Over the years much of the driving force behind the giving we see at Exeter is thanks to alumni engaging and encouraging their peers.

In Trinity Term 2015 our departing students took a well-earned break from revision to organise a Leavers’ Gift. 2015 marked a decade of Leavers’ Gifts at Exeter and this year’s students were keen to carry on this tradition by making a donation of £13.14 (reflecting the year the College was founded) in their final term to make a difference to the next generation of Exonians. Students voted to direct their gift towards the Vandana Singh Travel Bursary and the renovation of the JCR Kitchen and, together with two matching gifts from alumni, a total of £3,351 was raised. This is a truly fantastic sum and, what’s more, an astonishing 97% of leavers chose to make a gift: a greater proportion than any year group before.

From our newest alumni to those who matriculated over 50 years ago, it is wonderful to see so many peers across the decades coming together to achieve something great for the benefit of the next cohort of students.

If you would be interested in becoming a volunteer for your year group, please email katherine.fieldgate@exeter.ox.ac.uk for further information.

In organising events, writing appeal letters and even sending text messages to their friends to remind them to make their gift before the end of the College’s financial year, A special mention must go to Ian Hollands (1953, Modern History) whose commitment to inspiring his year group resulted in this year’s highest participation rate (excluding leavers) of 51%

We are extremely grateful to our year group volunteers who have been involved in many of the events, writing appeal letters and even sending text messages to their friends to remind them to make their gift before the end of the College’s financial year. A special mention must go to Ian Hollands (1953, Modern History) whose commitment to inspiring his year group resulted in this year’s highest participation rate (excluding leavers) of 51%.
Funding Cohen Quad

The creation of Exeter’s third quadrangle – Cohen Quad, on Walton Street - is the College’s biggest physical expansion since it moved onto Turl Street in 1315.

As with any building project, such as the College Library and Chapel in 1859 and Margary Quadrangle in 1964, in time the financial cost of building Cohen Quad will be all but forgotten as its impact on the collegiate community proves invaluable. However, it would be reckless if the costs of building Cohen Quad were not carefully considered, budgeted and managed at every stage. The original budget of £36m (for purchase and construction) has now increased to £44.5m, primarily because of the increase in building costs in an inflating market – the impact of which has been all the greater because of the delays incurred in securing planning permission.

The funding for the construction of Cohen Quad is a story that demonstrates the strong partnership between the College and its alumni community. To date a total of £16.5m has been raised in gifts and pledges from alumni and Friends of the College which represents just under 50% of the original budget.

The College will meet the remainder of the costs with funds from the endowment, the sale of some properties including part of Stapeldon House, a transfer from general reserves, and the bank loan that was taken out to purchase the site. The Governing Body has been careful and cautious in making these decisions, ensuring that they do not have a negative impact on the day to day running of the College or adversely affect the endowment in the long run. Care has also been taken to ensure that Cohen Quad is built to the highest standards to meet the future needs of the College so that it will endure alongside the historic site as an enviable place to live and study.

Your Support for Exeter: Selected Highlights

Over the course of the year Exeter receives generous gifts which help to fund exciting and important projects across the College. Here are just a few of the initiatives that donations have made possible this year.

Careers and Internships

Exeter’s Careers and Internships Office continues to go from strength to strength thanks to the support of donations to the Annual Fund. In 2014-15 over 20 careers-focused events were held (almost one for every week of term) to inspire and support students in thinking about their future career paths. To help enable students to take up internship opportunities the College awarded £5,000 in Internship Bursaries. These helped with the costs associated with internships such as travel and accommodation which may have prevented many students from taking up these opportunities in the past.

North American Travel Scholarship

Established in 2000 and supported by donations to the Annual Fund, Exeter’s North American Travel Scholarship offers a student the chance to travel to the USA and Canada, meet fellow Exonians and explore a topic of their own interest. This scholarship provides the unique opportunity for students to gain new international perspectives which informs their academic work and broadens their horizons. Our most recent Travel Scholar, Charanpreet Khaira (2013, English), spent this summer investigating experimental theatre and political messaging in North America.
Quad Lighting

Exeter is a place of great beauty boasting a Gothic Revival chapel and a Jacobean dining hall, to name just two of the College’s architectural gems. It has long been the College’s ambition to illuminate these remarkable architectural features, as well as to improve safety on site by providing better lighting.

Thanks to the support of Sydney Kentridge (1946, Jurisprudence), John Leighfield (1958, Literae Humaniores), John Hughes (1950, PPP) and Peter Job (1959, Modern Languages) this is now possible. Turl Street’s front quadrangle will be floodlit while stonework such as the Chapel’s statues and the intricate ceiling of the main entrance on Turl Street (pictured) will be brought to life at night.

Graduate Scholarships

The Peter Thompson Scholarship, generously created by Peter Thompson (Friend of the College), provides funding for an outstanding graduate student to complete their studies at Exeter. Together with a highly prestigious Oxford Clarendon Award, the scholarship offers a fully-funded place for a student in any discipline to make the very most of the vast array of opportunities Oxford has to offer, both academic and social. In Michaelmas 2015 Exeter welcomed its fourth Peter Thompson Scholar.
The Exeter Family: John Mavrogordato (1901, Literae Humaniores) was Fellow in Byzantine and Modern Greek Language and Literature during the Second World War. Seventy years on, his son, Michael, has left Exeter the largest legacy in the College’s history. This portrait of John Mavrogordato, by Mark Gertler, hangs in the SCR.

Exeter has been immensely fortunate to receive legacies totalling in excess of £7m during 2014–15. Every single legacy, whether large or small, is gratefully received, but this year three people in particular must be celebrated for their transformative philanthropy.

The legacy of Colin Hunter (1944, Modern History) has enabled Exeter to create a series of bursaries at the College. Named the Glenys Morwyth Hunter (née Preece) Bursaries in memory of Colin’s wife, they are awarded automatically to students eligible for financial support on their arrival at Oxford. Colin wrote to us in 2012: “Regrettably, my wife and I had no children and I wished her to be remembered as long as possible. We were both at Oxford together, and it is a place that we both loved. I am proud to support future Exeter students in her memory.”

In late 2014 the College was informed that it was the beneficiary of a legacy from Clement Le Rossignol (1940, Physics). Clement was a Jerseyman who received a King Charles I Scholarship while at Exeter and who remained proud of the College’s enduring links to the Channel Islands. His gift has enabled Exeter to endow almost fully its Fellowship in Philosophy and has created invaluable “seed funding” for the imminent renovation of the College Library.

Then, in early 2015, we learnt that Exeter was to be the beneficiary of a significant legacy gift from a non-alumnus. Michael Mavrogordato was the son of John Mavrogordato, an Etonian who came up to Exeter to read Literae Humaniores in 1901 and who returned to Exeter as a Fellow in Byzantine and Modern Greek Language and Literature during the Second World War. Unbeknown to us, Michael had left a significant portion of his estate to Exeter when drawing up his will. This will be the largest legacy gift ever received by the College: watch this space to learn how it will be used!

Other legacies received in 2014–15 have enabled the College to offer a postgraduate scholarship in Byzantine Studies, to create a new travel grant for students, to support the Library and to augment our Medical Electives Fund, assisting fifth-year medical students in their studies away from Oxford.

What is astonishing about these many and generous gifts is that, once transferred into Exeter’s endowment, they effectively “cancel out” the significant expenditure that the development of Cohen Quadrangle unavoidably necessitates. This means that no existing College activity is curtailed as a result of significant expenditure on capital projects, and as such these legacies are doubly valued.

Exeter’s Amelia Jackson Society for legacy pledgers, now in its third year of existence, continues to thrive and grow with a current total of 225 members. Our annual gathering has become a firm fixture in the College calendar and is always well-attended. We warmly encourage you to join the ranks of the Society!

At Exeter, we are as serious about future philanthropy as we are about lifetime giving. We hope that many alumni and Friends of the College will choose to include Exeter in their will, following the inspiring example of those who have come before us and whose generosity makes such a tangible difference to the lives of our students and academics today.

We remember and thank the following Exonians and Friends of the College whose legacies were received in the last year:
